

Matthew Putman

Matthew Putman is CEO and co-founder of Nanotronics and a founding member of The Quantum Industry Coalition, for which he has testified in front of Congress. He received his Ph.D. in Applied Mathematics and Physics from Columbia University, has published over 30 papers, and is an inventor on over 50 patent applications filed in the U.S. and other countries for his work in manufacturing, automation, inspection, instrumentation, super-resolution, and artificial intelligence. Matthew is frequently featured in media, including the New York Times, Bloomberg, Financial Times, Fast Company, and Fortune, to name a few.